

Through `til Morning

© Martin Browne Std. Tuning 7 October 2001

Em D Em D Em
I walked on hills I walked through valleys I felt the wind upon my skin
D Em D Em
The day felt good but now I'm weary and soon the evening will begin
D Em D Em
I watch the heron flying homewards, it caught the last rays of the sun
D Em D Em
I feel the cold mist on the water, another night has just begun.

[Chorus:]

C D Em C D Em
But dreams will guide us through `til morning and hope will carry us along
C D Em C
I'll lie beside you till the sunrise of another day
Em D Em
I have your love to keep me strong

I see the fresh, green grass of springtime, cool water ripples in the stream
Once-dormant hedgerows burst with blossom, wild flowers herald nature's scheme.
In June the energy of growing, the wheat fields push up t'wards the sky
But soon they'll fall beneath the ploughshare; the days grow short and Winter's nigh.

It doesn't seem much more than moments, since I was growing day by day
Life's journey stretched out far before me, it gathered pace along the way
And now we sit and watch our children, we feel their pain at every fall
And still we worry for their future - who holds the answer to it all?

It seems that life goes round in circles, another tide another day
We're guests here only for a moment, we are just points along the way
But I don't believe our time here's wasted, we're here to do the best we can
For we are pieces in the jigsaw, small fragments of the master plan.
